REGENERATIVE AGRICULTURE

When we grow food and plants used in the manufacturing of goods, it's important to be good stewards of the land being used.

Regenerative Agriculture, according to Regeneration International, describes "farming and grazing practices that, among other benefits, reverse climate change by rebuilding soil organic matter and restoring degraded soil biodiversity – resulting in both carbon drawdown and improving the water cycle." Some examples of Regenerative Agriculture include utilizing organic farming practices, no or minimum tilling, crop rotation, increasing plant diversity, planting cover crops, and integrating livestock.

The Co-op supports farms and companies that believe in the importance of Regenerative Agriculture and what it means for the future of our planet. We have a responsibility to care for our home, and we can do so by purchasing from businesses that share in our values of putting people and the planet first.
